Federal Education Control Up Again

GOVERNOR O'CONOR is dead right in warning Congress and the Education committee of the Senate that Maryland does not purpose to tolerate any federal interference in a proposed federal billion-dollar educational program for veterans of the

As originally proposed, the plan appears to have been just another attempt to saddle federal control of education reapecting war veterans as was sought in a general way not long since with the $300,-000,000 annual grant, which was pigeonholed after a storm of protest arose from all over the country. In the present attempt, as in the previous one, the war was utilized as a cloak to obtain the desired control.

Wiser heads of the Senate Education committee under the leadership of Senator Thomas, of Utah, however, have sensed the likelihood of a similar widespread protest from the country and arranged a revision of the pending measure to preclude any possibility of federal domination. That should be definite and without loopholes or

Maryland, as well as the other states, have the educational and administrative machinery necessary to carry on the education of its youth who return from the war just as they had before they were called to the colors. An educational plan for the veterans as a sort of reward will probably be arranged and, insofar as it will give opportunity to young men and women who did not have it or who would not likely obtain it, something of the kind is probably in order. But in ladling out money for the purpose care should be exercised in order that it may not be a free-andeasy wholesale shoveling affair. There is to the ability of taxpayers to contribute to it in spite of the contradictory notions of the New Deal squanderers. Maryland parents for the most part were able to educate their young folks and likely will be able to do so in the future.

But the main point made by Governor O'Conor is sound and will be supported generally. Maryland does not want federal control of any of its educational processes now any more than it did when previous attempts to put it in to effect were made.

A Terrible Tragedy. If Reports Are True

THE DANGER as well as the impropriety of wartime strikes is again emphasized in the report from Washington that a Balkan explosion in behalf of the Allied cause was knocked sidewise by the calling of the rail and steel strikes in this country. If that were true, it deserves the characterization given it of being a "tragedy of sensational proportions.

It is unfortunate that the officials who declared this to be a fact have not been directly quoted. David Lawrence, in his report of it, says the information was given to representatives of the American press "at an informal but nonetheless official manner." One radio commentator says the report is current that Gen. Marshall said it, which, being true, makes the statement all the more significant—and painful.

It milks few parsnips to lay the blame for the strike calls, although it has been the opinion of this newspaper and of many others that they all root back to a senseless and inequitable and feeble labor policy on the part of the Washington administration, and the inequitable labor laws and the biased and unfair administration of them, But, improper labor leadership does not escape censure. The thing now faced is definite prevention of future strikes for the duration. We have known that strike stoppages have curtailed war production on the home front but none have had the impact of them on the battle front brought home in such terrific impact as that indicated by the Washington report. We have to win this war on both fronts and nothing can be suffered to impede the

The radical element in Mexico-their New Dealers - came into power when Madero was elected in 1911. Besides the folly of trying to make all Mexicans prosperous by redistributing wealth, a war was begun on the Church of Rome, which had been left alone for four centuries and in spite of the fact that ninety-five per cent of all Mexicans, including the Indians, were devout Catholics. When they found they could not lick the church, these misguided leaders decided to join it, or at least make

Fantastic Claims By the Japanese

PERIODICALLY the Jap propagandists put their fantastic claims on the air. This is purely for home morale building purposes, as all Americans know, but it may be well to keep the true state of affairs in mind when reading the next Jap claim.

The Japs say America has lost 144,000 dead and wounded and 413,000 prisoners and deserters in the Pacific alone. The record is that America has lost 28,000 dead, 40,000 wounded and 62,000 prisoners and missing, a total in all classifications in every war theater in the world of 130,000.

A Tokyo claim is that thirty-one American battleships have been sunk or damaged. America has lost only one battleship, the Arizona. The Japs say they have sunk or damaged 148 American cruisers. The actual number of cruisers sunk is nine. Tokyo boasts of having sunk or severely damaged thirty-nine American aircraft carriers. The number of carriers lost is six. Actually thirty-seven United States destroyers have been sunk, instead of 126 claimed by Tokyo, Fourteen American submarines have been lost, instead of the 150 Tokyo has sent to the bottom via the ether. What's a Mere Man?

I've been gathering the evidence and I know

A Mere Man is any husband, brother, son or father who suggests that he knows something about women. Just let him intimate that he inderstands one particular woman better than some women do-and he wins the title auto-

Looks nad Gentle Sniffs. A man can interfere in the kitchen in the house, in the realm of women's clothes. He may boil eggs, make coffee, hake up a salad dressing and et some credit for intellience. He may hand out neories on What's Wrong 7ith the Baby or What to Do With Jimmy When He Marshall Maslin Runs Away. He may even set himself up as a general authority on Women and in a measure, he'll be accepted. But that's his limit. He's not supposed to thow what women really think. They decided long ago that the cleverest of men is a child in the hands of a designing woman. Look at Samson and Delilah, at Paris and Helen of Troy, at Caesar and Cleopatra. The men also decided long ago that Samson and Paris and how any moderately shrewd woman can twist It does seem to make some difference to women whether men like or dislike a certain woman, if they think Miss Jane is a sweet little girl of Mrs. Jones a fine woman-but that doesn't prove that the men know what Miss Jane or Mrs. Jones are really like. Only the women can know that and if a man INSISTS that he knows, "Isn't that just like a man?"

or "How could a mere man know that?" Men have been battering against the fortress of women for countless centuries. They have been liking women, loving them, hating them, thinking about them since the beginnings of the race and they think they should know something about them. (Certainly it must have taken some understanding to hold them in subection for so long). But no woman will agree, The wisest man on earth when he dares to give an opinion about ONE woman immediately becomes a Mere Man. He can roar and bluster but he's still a mere man and all he says is sound and fury signifying only his ignorance,

English System Is More Democratic, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. - One doesn't often rush to the defense of President Roosevelt on matters political or phrases ambiguous, but when he told a questioner at his press conference the other day that the query about a fourth term "picayunish," this was but natural impa-

elves, and this in the New Deal program which he proudly reviewed? And did the questioner ever stop to think who else could make a good nominee for the Democratic party in the year 1944 except Mr. Roosevelt? If that quesshould never have been propounded to the president himself-for the latter is unquestionably convinced that the Democratic party, by all the rules and precedents of party politics, would be foolish to deprive itself of the services of a man at the top of the ticket who had demonstrated three times that he could sweep into office on his coattails, so to speak, senators, representatives, governors and even con-

Top Vote-Getter

No practical politician from the Bowery to the Golden Gate would suggest that there is any other votegetter within the Democratic party today who begins to compare with Mr. Roosevelt. And the men who go as delegates to a national convention are practical politicianschosen or handicapped as a rule by reason of their relationship to the party organizations.

But while the practical politicians may see Mr. Roosevelt as the nominee for vote-getting reasons, what about Mr. Roosevelt himself? Does he intend to be a candidate for a fourth term? Does he want to be a candidate? Or should he be a

Such questions need not be asked of Mr. Roosevelt direct. They can be readily answered by reading his letter to the convention of 1940 when he accepted a third-term nomination. Whatever he said then as applied to the war crisis of that year-for total war had broken out in May, 1940, with the invasion of Holland and Belgium and, by June, France was knocked out of the war-applies just as much to 1944.

Question Put to Test

It will be recalled that Mr. Roosevelt struggled with his conscience then and came to the conclusion that continuity in government was imperative. Once he made that decision and balked the third-term precedent he left the issue to the American people to decide. If they favored the two-term custom, it was up to them to say so. Certainly nobody could quarrel with the right of a political party to make a nomination and test the issue before the people in a constitutional man-

As Mr. Roosevelt doubtless reasons it, the American people are the ones to decide whether there should be a fourth term or even a fifth term. It's their government and their right to choose their leaders which are at stake. Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt doesn't see any dictatorship or any other danger in the prolonged tenure because he has at times called to the attention of those who have talked with m the very interesting experience of Canada, which is right next door us. Canada has had the services of Mackenzie King, as premier, for about twenty-one years with an interruption of only a total of relatively few months on two occasions in that whole period, and nobody thinks of Canada as anything but a democracy.

An Obvious Remedy

From the Wheeling. W. Va., Intelligencer

Governor Saltonstall, of Massachusetts, is doing more than any other state executive that we know of to hammer home to the public the destructive character of the steady trend toward centralized govern-

In his latest public discussion of the issue, before the Insurance Federation of New York, Governor Saltonstall declared that "financial help from the federal government" has become a "whip" with which regional administrators of the federal government can crack state and local officials into line. This flow of federal money to the states and local units, the Massachusetts executive said, has given rise to the doctrine of "or else," explaining:

"We see regional administraters of this or that come to our Mayors and our Governors and say, 'You do it this way, or

"What is this whip? It is the financial help of the federal government without which the services that the mayors or governors are responsible for providing cannot be carried out. Delegations of citizens who customarily receive the benefits of these services protest. The mayor or governor loses his nerve, and does what the administration tells him.

All of which should be obvious to every observant person. The remedy also should be obvious-outlaw the practice of a larger unit of government passing down money to a lesser unit for any purpose.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4-It was Hitler's personal strategy againalone-which got the Nazi armies in Russia into their present

An order was sent from der intuitive fuehrer to the commanderin-chief of the southern armies weeks back to hold the advance positions at the southern end of the line around Krivei Rog at all costs. The decision had to be Hitler's rather ations in defiance rest or open revolts through the Balkans where suppressed oppositions would be drawn from their holes to battle again as the Russians approached

North of that area he sought to protect the flank of his daring Krivoi Rog armies by a decisive counter-attack on Kiev. As previously told, he left buildings standing in Kiev and demolished little of the central portion of the city, so confident was he that he could recapture and occupy it through the winter. His counter-attack failed halfway to his goal, after six weeks of tremendous effort. Indeed, only two days ago the comuniques showed the presence of large numbers o ftanks in the area where he was still trying futilely to redeem his counter-attack.

Whole Front Endangered

The Reds, however, poured in ipon his forces west of Kiev in the most decisive action since Stalingrad. Perhaps the size of the forces involved there has been overestimated. Instead of having twenty-two divisions at that one spot, the Nazis may have little more than that strung out all the way from the Pripet marshes to the Dnieper tip in the Krivoi Rog probably covers the same extensive

But as the collapse of one single misplaced board may cause an entire house to tumble, his Kiev sector defeat soon endangered the whole front, particularly the Krivoi Rog armies. The smartly led Reds did not try to push the Kiev counteroffensive straight back into Poland, but directed their main drive southwestward toward the rear of those southern Nazi armies to cut them

Yesterday, the southern commander-in-chief of the Nazi armies called a headquarters meeting of all his generals to ponder the danger into which Hitler's strategy had placed him. Behind him, he could see no good defensive position where he might dig in east of the Dniester river 200 miles back on the Rumania border (the Bug river not being suitable to strong defense). Unless he could get his armies back there before the Reds arrived from the north, he was lost-his lines all the way up from the Black sea being reported very

therefore, seemed in the making, but it is doubtful that it could be accompanied by the same excuse as last time—a "shortening of the lines" to be held by fewer men, Today, after all the Nazi retreats of the past few months, their line is actually longer than when they started.

Hitler extricated himself from a similar desperate position after Stalingrad by sacrificing one of his armies whole in order that others might escape. It will be more difficult to buy himself off from rout again even at such a high cost because he is not as strong as then. And even if he does, he will be back near the Rumanian border, a position he feared most-so dangerous politically that he risked the entrapment now at hand and personally ordered his southern army to stay at its advance position.

Only at the far northern end of the line have the Germans been able to present several strong points to delay the Russians. The promised Red drive to the Baltic is not likely to develop for some time until these

A Major Objective

From the Wheeling. W. Va., Intelligencer

The Republican party, if it wins control of Congress in the 1944 election, will work for reduced taxation 'all along the line," according to Representative Knutsen, of Minnesota, House minority leader

Here is a campaign pledge which should command more public confidence than is usually accorded a political promise. For the Republican party has demonstrated, by its record in the present session of Congress, that it means what it says. It was Republican votes and Republican initiative which made possible the drastic cut in the Administration tax bill from more than ten billion dollars to a little over two billions. And it was Republican aggressiveness-aided by conservative Democrats - which brought the picture of administration extravagance vividly before the American people.

The enormity of our tax load is only now coming to be fully realized. We agree with Mr. Knutsen that peacetime production cannot stand up under the present tax load; that taxes are as high now as the traffic will bear, and that drastic reductions must be made throughout the governmental structure if we are to see our way through. Speaking of taxes, the Internal Revenue Bureau will show one of the largest personnel increases, in terms of percentage, of any federal agency during this fiscal year. Congress has been notified that the bureau will add 13,125 new employes this year-11,204 in the field and 1.921 in Washington. The bureau's "paper work" has reached mountainous proportions and it expects to receive one hundred eleven million returns from taxpayers during the year. Despite the army of added employes needed, the bureau claims that the cost of collecting taxes is decreasing. In 1939 it cost $1.30 to collect every $100 in federal taxes. What many a harassed taxpayer would welcome are accurate figures on the cost in time and mental agony involved in filling out the operating today in many enterprises bureau's complicated income tax form and a recipe for locating funds with which to pay the taxes due.
